

Poetry Series

Neeru Aseem
- poems -

Publication Date:

2014

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Neeru Aseem(24 June 1967)

Survive!

Leave
Just leave!

Leave without yielding to a process
It is neither easy nor difficult
It is simply leaving.

Can you do it?
Can I do it?

Let's explore
If love can survive this way!

Neeru Aseem

That Day

I said I hated you
You disclosed the same

That day
We sat for the last time
Not to keep secrets inside
Anything confined

So we dug a bit more

We shared the ways we cheated
We shared that we cheated

That day
We saw tears in four eyes
Salt was more
Than ever before

That day
We hugged
We thought it was the last time
We ran through the vibes
Never sensed before
That day
We met to depart
To deal with the residues
As a policy matter

We thought of ourselves high
We appreciated
Conveyed gratitude

Finally, we held hands to leave
The flood receded
A moment descended

Our hands refused to loosen

That day

We didn't let the light
To entrap
Into the black hole

That day
We were done

But how come!
We suddenly started all over again.

Neeru Aseem

Who

I can't do anything
when you are not there
All my time and energy
get consumed
in searching & seeking you

I can't do anything
when you are here
All reasons vanish
nothing seems worth while

Till now
I haven't decided
which one is undesirable
me
you
or work?

Neeru Aseem