

Poetry Series

samantha avilez
- poems -

Publication Date:
2009

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

samantha avilez(july 25)

I'm just a thirteen year old girl. With so many problems no child or teenager should ever have to face. Other than that I'm just your ordinary teen, goes out with friends, has a boyfriend, and a group of people who dislike me. But to fill in the other things about me that isn't your ordinary teen? I cut myself. I'm a very depressed person who hides it behind fake smiles. All the poems that I submit on here tells about my emotions prior to that certain day that they were written.

Every Time I Cry

Every time I've cried is every time I've been hurt

Every time I've been hurt is every time I've wanted to die

Every time I've wanted to die is because the depression is unbearable

The depression is a never ending sadness its a numbness i can't escape

The numbness scares me, terrifies me takes it's time killing my will to live

Ever so slowly the happiness leaves and the depression takes it's place

samantha avilez

The Drepression Is Here To Stay

this is dedicated to all that know who i am, to those i love.

Every time I start to love, feels like the depression has gone away.
But it never did leave, and never will it go.

Because I have over time learned to never let anyone get to close to me to tell them everything to love them as you would another

Because some are never true they never really cared

They went and stabbed me in the back while I wasn't looking and the thing is it never stopped they did this over and over

Not once careing about me careing about how betrayed I felt not once did they look back on it not once did they say sorry

Now my heart feels hard as ice and is as black as it can get

samantha avilez